

COVID-19 has hit our lives with its side effects which is not only on our health but also on our lives too. Since a year or two a drastic change in lives has been seen. From travelling every month to being quarantined at home. This was not enough but it had its way on to festivals that were not only celebrated but were also counted as memories which were cherished forever. But we humans are profound of finding happiness in every small thing. The thought that maybe a celebration for them at their safe place can be beneficial to them. This was my point of view too. I feel like that is true somehow. In some days a great festive is coming for my country India in which we celebrate our freedom and known as Independence Day. Usually in this festival a sizeable crowd and a chief guest with political leaders supposed to come in capital state of India Delhi for different types of performance of people of different states. But last year performers stood over the screen for the respect of our country and for our safety. All the measures were taken by government and will be taken until everything gets back normal. The ceremony of this occasion takes place in Red Fort. Motive behind these ceremonies is not only to respect our country but to give motivational message to us through their performance and this is the reason every watcher finds it more interesting seeing. This year too families will gather together in front of screens and will enjoy. Everything will be joyful and most important motivating for everyone this festive. Our screens are not reality but can't it be the surface to see the reality?
